THE GREAT LIGHT BY FINLEY LYON.

Bryan Choral Club to Be Heard in Concert at Carnegie Hall and A. and M. Auditorium.

SOLOISTS:

Mrs. W. C. Davis
Mrs. Webb Howell
Miss Gussie Buchanan
G. K. Sims
D. M. Sims, Baritone; Director for Vocal Department, San Marcos Baptist Academy, San Marcos, Texas.

On Friday night of next week the Bryan Choral Club is to be heard at Carnegie Hall in the Sacred Cantata, "The Great Light" by Finley Lyon.

This Cantata is a beautiful one and has won much favor throughout the country among church circles and choral societies. This promises to be one of the best treats, musically, our people have ever listened to, and it is being looked forward to with much pleasure.

For the past two months the Club has been working faithfully under the direction of Mr. Sims, and is presenting this program it is assumed that it will be one that will be appreciated by all who attend.

The accompanists for this occasion are: Miss Maud Mikhil, Mrs. Robert Webb and Mrs. H. O. Bostwright.

Prof. Bradley M. Sims, Barytone
Director Vocal Department, San Marcos Baptist Academy, San Marcos, Texas.

The Bryan Choral Club is fortunate in securing Mr. Sims, a brother of the director of the Music Department Bryan Baptist Academy, as soloist for the concert in which they are to appear next Friday and Saturday nights.

Prof. Sims has had the training of the best American and European Conservatories of music, and he is a singer of merit. His voice is of a beautiful quality, and he sings with that ease and grace which is characteristic of a vocal artist. He has appeared in concert and recital in many northern and eastern cities and has been praised highly for his artistic work.

The San Marcos Daily says of him after having heard him in the concert given by the faculty at the opening of the Academy in September: "Mr. Sims displayed to his listeners that he is an artist." The Milano Daily Press of Milano, Italy, says of him: "His conceptions of his art are of the highest. He possesses a beautiful, well trained voice, which, with his extensive repertoire, easily puts him in the front rank with the best operatic and concert artists."

In addition to the barytone solos in the Cantata, Mr. Sims will be heard in two different groups of songs, both here in the city and at the auditorium of the A. and M. College.

Mrs. T. C. Nunn left today for her home at Andrews.

Mrs. J. P. Royder of Wellborn was a visitor to the city today.

Mr. and Mrs. Zeffie Jones of Reliance, were in the city today.

Mrs. J. A. Gammill returned to Calvert today after visiting Mrs. V. B. Hudson.

Mrs. H. H. Prewett of Franklin, is the guest of her mother Mrs. Kate Wilcox.

Misses Hattie Haltom and Bessie Seale returned to their home in Benckley today after visiting in this city.

SACRED SONG BY MR. J. D. SANTER

HIS OWN MEDICINE.

The Dose That Was Handed to the Persistent Agent.

He was a sewing machine agent of the most aggressive type. For twenty minutes the lady of the house had been awaiting an opportunity to say that she already possessed one.

At last he paused, only long enough, however, to thrust a card into the lady's hand.

The bit of pasteboard was certainly a novelty.

"My name is Selem," it read, "of the firm of Blank & Co., sewing machine manufacturers, and I intend to prove to you that it is madness to defer purchasing one of our unequalled machines."

After a long description of the machine came the following:

"You may plead that you are unable to work a machine. I will remove that objection in fifteen minutes or in three lessons. Will call next Wednesday."

When the agent called again a six foot man opened the door and blandly remarked:

"You're the sewing machine man, I suppose?"

"Yes, I called last week, and"—

"Yes, I know," interrupted the big man. "You don't know me, I suppose. My name's Bury of Bury & Keenem, undertakers, and I intend to prove to you that it is madness to defer purchasing one of our unequalled coffins."

The agent began to edge away.

"You may plead that you are scarcely qualified for a coffin," the big man went on. "I will remove that objection in ten seconds."

But the agent simply tore from the house.—London Tit-Bits

WHAT TO DO.

Hints on First Aid to Everybody on All Occasions.

When a man rushes into your office hurriedly and says:

"By Jingo, Dawson, I hate to speak of it, but I need $500 like the very old Dickens today!"

Answer—"What a singular coincidence. Binks! I do too!"

When the lovely young maiden at the seaside to whom you have been paying court all summer shakes her head violently and says:

"No, Mr. Blithers, I cannot imagine any circumstances under which I could be induced to marry you."

Answer—"Thanks, Miss Jones. This is a great relief. I was afraid you had misconstrued my attentions and, of course, desired to live up to my implied obligations."

When you run face to face with your tailor upon the street and he turns a cold, dead eye upon you and says:

"Excuse me, Mr. Bump, but what have you to say about my little bill?"

Answer—"I don't think I have met your little bill, Mr. Knipperton. Indeed, I didn't know you had any children at all."

While he is recovering from this jump into a taxi and proceed to break the speed laws.—Caryle Smith in Harper's Weekly.

One Who Knows.

"Does any one in the class," asked the teacher, "know the origin of the corn laws?"

"Yes, ma'am," answered the shaggy haired pupil. "They were written by John Bunion."—Chicago Tribune.

A Reliable Plan.

"Whenever I don't like a man very well," remarked the cynic person, "I give him a tip on the nose. I don't care how much it costs for him."

"But suppose it wins?"

"Then he's unhappy because he didn't bet more."

"And if he doesn't bet at all?"

"I keep on giving tips until one does win, and then he feels as if he had missed the chance of his life."—Washington Star.

A Rialto View.

"Do you think a little Shakespeare would do as a vaudeville act?" inquired Hamlet Pat.

"Why not?" responded Yorick Ham.

"Everybody feels that he has got to stand for it if it comes along. No man is going to admit that Shakespeare is over his head."—Washington Herald.

His Little Joke.

Percy—I—aw—wrestled for an hour with me scurf this morning. Algernon—Which won the victory, dear boy, you or the scurf? Percy—Neither. Can't you see the match was a tie? Haw, haw!—Chicago News.

Wisdom in Fable.

Among the best things that have ever been written are the Aesop's fables, which date back to the sixth century B. C. They present human nature as it always has been, and is probably always will be. Take, for example, the story of "The Fox Without a Tail."

"A fox was once caught in a trap by his tail and in order to get free was obliged to leave it behind. He knew that his fellows would make fun of his tailless condition, so he made up his mind to induce them all to part with their tails. At the next assemblage of foxes he made a speech on the uselessness of tails in general and the inconvenience of a fox's tail in particular, declaring that never in his whole life had he felt so comfortable as now in his tailless freedom. When he sat down a sly old fox rose and, waving his brush, said, with a sneer, that if he had lost his tail he would be convinced by the last speaker's arguments, but until such an accident occurred he fully intended to vote in favor of tails."

Peculiar Superstitions.

The people of Kulu are extremely superstitious and go in extensively for demonology. Many trees are held to be sacred and have tiny temples dedicated to them. The demons are popularly supposed to live at the tops of trees, and if a tree falls in such a way that it is possible to pass under it, as is often the case on the mountain sides, every man before going beneath the trunk will place on it a stick or stone to propitiate its guardian spirit. Certain streams are also sacred, and no one is allowed to wash dirty clothes in them. One year some strangers came into the valley and happened to pollute the water of a river in this manner. It chanced to be a year of extraordinary rainfall, and the people implicitly believe that the excessive rain was sent by the outraged "deities" of the stream as punishment. —Wide World Magazine.
